

YEARBOOK 2018

PRESIDENT'S YEARBOOK MESSAGE FOR ACADEMIC YEAR 2017-18

The American University of Afghanistan is an Afghan institution with an American style of teaching. It was founded by Afghan leadership and is grateful to continue its existence through the generous support of the American people. Almost 90% of the university's budget comes from the United States government. The university is one of the most enduring and successful legacies of the American mission in Afghanistan since 2001. The United States is part of a coalition of more than 100 countries and organizations that provide both security and civilian assistance to Afghanistan. At the Brussels Conference on Afghanistan in October 2016, the United States and other international donors committed to provide Afghanistan $15.2 billion in civilian assistance through 2020. AUAF is committed to support U.S. efforts to help Afghanistan become a peaceful, stable, democratic and prosperous nation through the development of a market economy, a legal system that respects human rights, a vibrant civil society, freedom of expression, a modern civil service, and the equality of men and women.

The academic year 2017-2018 has witnessed significant accomplishments at the university. In February 2018, AUAF became the first university in Afghanistan, either private or public, to receive accreditation from the Ministry of Higher Education. This attestation of quality will assist our students in their pursuit of further higher learning and employment around the world. University leadership is now pursuing regional accreditation within South Asia and accreditation in the United States, assurances of quality that will further assist our students and faculty. The university opened three new buildings that significantly enhance the institution's service to students: a new 200-bed women's dormitory, dedicated in January by the U.S. ambassador to Afghanistan, John Bass; a new cafeteria; and a new academic building, the Bayat Institute of Technology, opened in March 2018 with funds from the generous donor, Dr. Ehsan Bayat. The U.S. government funded the female dorm and cafeteria and equipped and furnished the Bayat Institute of Technology. All academic programs offer their full complement of courses, following the re-opening of the university in March 2017, and there is significantly more classroom space and fully equipped science laboratories. The university signed memoranda of understanding with dozens of private high schools to increase the number of students applying for admission to the undergraduate program and is currently negotiating a similar agreement with the Ministry of Education to increase applications from public secondary schools from across the country. To accommodate this influx of new students who do not yet qualify for full admission due to lack of proficiency in the English language, the university launched the new Academy program that offers one year of preparation in English, mathematics and study skills. The university will also provide training for high school English teachers to help students become better prepared to succeed in an institution where English is the medium of instruction.

Our graduates are fulfilling the university's mission of educating the future leaders of Afghanistan and can be found in high positions of responsibility in both the private and public sectors of Afghan society. A record number of AUAF seniors and recent graduates received Fulbright scholarships to earn Master's degrees in the United States and, upon completion of their degree, return to Afghanistan and contribute to its development.

I am pleased to report that AUAF has prevailed over the terrorists who attempted to destroy it in August 2016 and will continue to contribute to Afghanistan's transformation through the power of education for many decades to come.

Minor: Law

Workplace: Deputy Country Director at American Councils for International Education

International Education.

Due to various distinct reasons, Hasib was not able to attend college for some years. It was in 2013 when he was officially awarded with a full four-year undergraduate scholarship by the U.S. Embassy to study at the American University of Afghanistan (AUAF). Hasib began his studies in the Fall of 2013 with a full-time job, and decided, over the course of time, to major in Political Science & Public Administration and to minor in Law. He is now on the verge of graduating with a predicted 3.9 GPA honors degree, and planning to apply for the Fulbright Program the following year.

Hasib feels fortunate to be part of the AUAF community and expresses his gratitude through his achievements "I am quite fortunate to have been recognized for my excellent performance and scholastic achievement, at AUAF on multiple occasions. I have thus far received five President High Honor and Honor awards [including the one I will be receiving in spring 2018] from the AUAF leadership, and hope to continue with this trend until my graduation."

Why did you choose AUAF?

AUAF is an academically-focused school and has been successful in providing an intellectually inspiring learning environment for its student body. AUAF is the best school out there. It has been consecutively ranked number one on the charts of Hasib completed his secondary school education in universities in the country. I chose AUAF as it is home Amani School in Kabul, and started his sophomore to a number of excellent academicand proficient year of high school as an exchange student of faculty in a range of disciplines, who are passionate the Kennedy-Lugar Youth Exchange & Study about advancing students' capacity and education. (YES) program at the Cypress Bay High School in AUAF provides top-notch courses, stimulates a Florida, USA. He is currently a Political Science & progressive vision for Afghanistan, and nurtures a Public Administration student and serves as the creative and intellectual community of students. Deputy Country Director at American Councils for From a comparative perspective, I personally find its academic training of the highest caliber, and it goes without saying that AUAF has transformed itself into a symbol of excellence when it comes to providing quality education and making a valuable impact in Afghanistan.

> AUAF has always managed to exceed Hasib's expectations. It was at AUAF where he had the opportunity to make some of his best friends. "I find the community at AUAF truly open and accepting. It is a highly engaging, dynamic campus with an incredible representation of diversity."

> Hasib strongly believes that the opportunity to embark on his journey has extensively helped him with his professional experience at the workplace. Hasib highlights that studying at AUAF has equipped him with necessary skills and key tools to make significant progress in his workplace. It has been his academic exposure that he has had before which help him endure a successful career as the Deputy Country Director for the American Councils office in Afghanistan. Juggling between work, school, and family has become a style life for Hasib which has not been easy for him but he cherishes the support he receives from AUAF community, motivating faculty, and rewarding educational experience that gets him through. Hasib will graduate on May 2018 and is looking forward for more milestones to achieve.

Name:Munira Aziz Major: Law

Workplace: United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan - UNAMA

Munira Aziz started going to school secretly during Taliban time. Munira graduated in 2007, at age 14, the youngest graduate of her school, she earned a scholarship to pursue a Bachelor's in Law at AUAF.

It is the 10th year of her professional career, right after high school graduation at age 14, Munira started to work and has been part of the efforts for elimination of violence against women, women and youth empowerment, strengthening political parties and electoral processes through national and international organizations. Presently, she serves at the United Nations Assistance Mission in Afghanistan (UNAMA).

She represented AUAF in the prestigious William C. Vis International Commercial Arbitration Court Moot in the national, regional and international rounds and qualified as runner-up in Middle East along with the team. Currently she is AUAF's Vis coach, in which the team could secure Championship and all available awards in the National round and will further compete at the regional and international levels.

She has been recipient of President's High Honor Award for each semesters. This year Munira represented AUAF at Istanbul International Model United Nation and the boot camp with Stanford University and Afghanistan Legal Education Program (ALEP).

"Studying at AUAF has exceeded my expectations. It has provided me with the opportunity to explore an array of different possibilities for my future, most of which I would not have been aware of without coming to this university. The quality of education and opportunities at AUAF was eye-opening to me. For me studying at AUAF is about understanding one's strengths, weaknesses and then trying to build upon and widen your horizon for becoming an effective contributor to Afghanistan's development."

The women's dormitory is a state-of-the art three-story 3,000 square meter building that includes living quarters for up to 200 students, study and lounge areas, and administrative space.

To expand housing opportunities to the broadest possible range of women, priority placement will be given to women from outside the capital, who are unable to commute to classes.

Accreditation Announcement, 14th February

The American University of Afghanistan is proud to announce its accreditation through the Ministry of Higher Education of Islamic Republic of Afghanistan. The American University of Afghanistan is the first private university in the country to be considered as a fully accredited institution of higher education. Based on the framework of the Accreditation Directorate, any public and private university operating in Afghanistan, implementing the minimum criteria of the accreditation process and that are able to get the minimum score of 85 through the Accreditation Directorate in the third phase, is considered as an accredited institute and is entitled to all rights and privileges for five years. The American University of Afghanistan successfully earned 89.33 points and effective February 14th, 2018, it is considered a fully accredited institution.

March 31st

Afghanistan's largest, private philanthropic Health, Education and Social Development organization, completed the construction of The Bayat Institute of Technology (BIT), a new, 32,000 square foot Science and Technology Teaching and Research Center, located at The American University of Afghanistan (AUAF).

"The Bayat Institute of Technology at AUAF is among the most architecturally distinguished and structurally sound academic buildings developed by—and built by—Afghans," said Mr. Hamid Rahin, the Vice President of Infrastructure for The Bayat Group. "The building is a remarkable example of Afghan skill, craftsmanship and determination." "The Bayat Institute of Technology at The American University of Afghanistan is a powerful example of the partnership between The Bayat Foundation and AUAF—a partnership that is providing AUAF's students with an academically rigorous and valuable scientific and technical education," said Dr. Ehsanollah Bayat, the Co-Founder and Chairman of The Bayat Foundation.

Professor Profile Dr. John Wall

Professor John Wall is an English language and literature instructor, he is from New Zealand has received his university education in Ireland, UK, and New Zealand. His intellectual interests lie in a combination of philosophy and literature of which he believes is the metaphorical and conceptual components of knowledge. He is not quite sure what has brought him to Afghanistan, however, the passion of Afghan Youths towards studying is one of the aspects that keeps him here at AUAF.

Professor John Wall teaches literature and academic writing, he hopes to start teaching philosophy embedded with historical and social aspects. John believes Afghan students have grown up very far from the European and American literature which is being taught in AUAF and are not bound with the culture, social, national, regional, and linguistic identities. John finds it very inspiring to teach a totally and radically different literature, he says "After all, this is the nature of literature; the exploration of otherness, seeking out its textures and patterns. In this way we come to understand our own otherness."

Professor John states that AUAF curriculum is work in progress as at all the other universities. Despite the curriculum being in high ranking, John strives to improve the curriculum through his inputs and constantly encourages students to expand their interests at the global level.

"World history lies at the core of this society. At the same time, there is no other country like Afghanistan. This is cosmopolitanism at its best," said John during the interview. For him witnessing the joy of students and parents on the graduation is the greatest rewards, he is happy seeing students choose unexpected modes of thought and actions while embracing their future lives as responsibility and experiment.

PROFESSOR PROFILE DR. SUJATA CHANDARLAPATY

"What students become are a reflection of faculty at AUAF" as Dr. Sujatha explained how AUAF students are involved in leadership of Afghanistan. Dr. Sujatha Chanderlapathy is an assistant professor of Business Department at the American University of Afghanistan. Dr. Chandarlapaty joined AUAF community in 2013 and have been serving the university since then. It has been a roller coaster of which she has been involved with since she has joined; she has built a strong sense of student community throughout the years.

"I have noticed many students as they climb the ladder and have witnessed their journey as they carry on. AUAF gives the students the platform and a clear vision, we are them and they are us. All they are looking for is the extended hand to be coached and show them the bigger picture. It is all about showing them about why steps of life is important. As a mentor, you have to be the energizing figure because you are shaping their mind and future." said Dr. Sujatha as she explained her AUAF journey over the past few years.

Dr. Sujatha teaches organizational behavior and leadership classes at AUAF. She strongly believes that behavior is the drive for business and other major aspects and its understanding can play a major role in students development.

As Robert Frost has said

"Two roads diverged in a wood, and I -- I took the one less traveled by, and that has made all the difference."

You need to strongly believe that you can take the other road, that would make all the difference!

ABDUL HAY SADRY MBA STUDENT

Abdul Hay Sadry works for the government of Afghanistan, as the Senior Advisor Plan and Policy and Director of Private Sector Development at Ministry of Agriculture, Irrigation, and Livestock (MAIL). He is a Kennedy Lugar Youth Exchange & Study (YES) program; upon his arrival from the States, Abdul Hay saw AUAF as the only option which leads the American Style of Teaching in Afghanistan to pursue his education in. "The curriculum, teaching standards, international faculty (teachers), university culture and environment played a vital role in convincing me to take admission at AUAF!" Said Abdul Hay.

Abdul Hay joined AUAF as undergraduate student in 2008 and graduated from the BBA program and is currently pursuing his MBA in AUAF. AUAF has played a vital role in shaping his professional career in Afghanistan. He has learned the most effective leadership, motivational and management theories in classes which has enhances his skills in managing, controlling and leading various different situations in my workplaces." I learned various business frameworks such as porter's five forces, a tool for analyzing competition of a business. This framework has helped me in understanding various business situations and making right decisions at the difficult times." said Abdul Hay. Abdul Hay values the culture of acceptance at AUAF the most and sees it as one of the main pillars of the institution which has made it prestigious.

Abdul Hay has made many friends in AUAF, "Making new friends has been the most important memory of my AUAF journey. I came across different people, had a privilege of being friends with so many, an opportunity to learn from each and a pleasure of maintaining long

SHOAIB TIMORY LAW INSTRUCTOR

Shoaib Timory is a law instructor from Herat province, he has completed his Bachelors in Law from Kabul University and his masters from the George Washington University as a Fulbright scholar. He has been teaching at AUAF since March 2014. His journey started as an adjunct professor and now he is a full time assistant professor.

Mr. Shoaib has been teaching a number of law subjects but his main focuses areas are international law and administrative law. Aside from teaching, he is also working as the deputy of state affairs in the administrative office of the president. Mr. Shoaib has been working at American University of Afghanistan because it is one of the most successful universities in Afghanistan, as he says "I could not resist such an offer".

He believes AUAF has established a platform for students to grow and achieve their goals, given many opportunities being provided to students; where students have access to thousands of books, online resources, moot court competition, debate clubs, and internship programs which help students grow. Mr. Shoaib has faith that AUAF plays a major role in sustainable development in academia in Afghanistan. "I think the alumni and the students of AUAF are the current and future leaders of this country. They are leading by example and surely, future is theirs." Shoaib thinks everything would be been excellent if there were no security threats, but notes, "there are necessities and for greater good, you should ignore smaller discomforting realities!"

Mr. Shoaib is also a great football fan and he has a football page with an anonymous identity along with more than 42,000 followers on Facebook!
